THE LION'S TALE

Support the Brotherhood

AN ALUMNUS' PERSPECTIVE OF ΣAE PURDUE

Most consider ΣAE Purdue as King of the Hill both in reputation and size. Good academics, athletics, brotherhood, and engagement make for a strong chapter. ΣAE is the place where students seek social action.

But for us old dudes, things are different in the Greek world.

The bond to one's fraternity isn't as strong as what many of us experienced. It's more common to see guys "drop" (resign), particularly when they're living out. Many of us lived in until graduation after our time in the dorms, but those days are gone at Purdue, where Greek seniors want apartment living for lifestyle reasons. Most Greeks elect this arrangement (there are many appealing options), and we've adapted. Recruitment each semester (fall is the big one) is more intense, and we recruit with attrition in mind, not unlike how airlines used to overbook knowing that some reservations won't appear. The house can comfortably accommodate 83 brothers, and our target is to initiate at least 75 annually to account for attrition either via resignation or the decision to live out. Many conversations with Purdue's Greek office affirm this is widespread at Purdue. The result is that we lack senior leadership, which can create other issues.

Our operating budget exceeds $1 million annually.

Sounds like a lot, but we spend a lot too— food service, debt service, property/liability insurance, maintaining our house set on three acres, and on and on. Based on expert advice, we raise house bills to compete with the total cost of living in dorms/apartments, but we struggle to build capital reserves for a building first constructed 105 years ago and enlarged 70 years ago when the south wing facing Quincy Street was built. Ours is an impressive property, and our to-do list is daunting. After I win the lottery and have stupid money to morph into Daddy Warbucks, I can easily exceed $1 million underwriting capital projects the house needs now—$275,000 to expand parking on land we've acquired and $200,000 to rehab our crumbling 105-year-old front porch facing the Wabash River. Until then, ΣAE Purdue is tax-exempt, so your contributions can help your tax return.

It would be terrific to have more alumni engaged in all aspects of guiding the best fraternity at Purdue.

Working with the undergraduates keeps one on one's toes and is most satisfying. Please contact me if you'd like to lend a hand.

It was both an honor and a privilege when I became an ΣAE in October 1960, and I still pinch myself that I was invited to join. I hope you feel similarly. Please feel free to call or email me.

CHAPTER GOALS

- Raise as much money as we can for our philanthropy.
- Improve our house GPA.
- Participate in more community and service hours than the previous semester.

ΣAE at the Engineering Fountain for our Pie an ΣAE event. New members and executive officers took some pies to the face—all for charity and a great time on campus.

CHAPTER ACTIVITIES AND PHILANTHROPY

The spring semester is in full swing at Purdue, and we are thrilled to share all that we've been up to over the past year as well as plans for the upcoming months.

ΣAE Purdue has spent its time gaining new members. We currently have 53 living in the chapter house and 122 living out for a total of 175. Last semester, we had a 3.1 house GPA. We have been working to increase this number by holding study tables and giving brothers a designated time to help them with their academics.

Outside of academics, brothers played in the intramural league for handball and went 2-1 for the season. There are five teams playing in intramural basketball in the spring semester. This semester, we are "buddies" with Alpha Phi. To start the spring, we had a Greek wedding with the sorority and held Valentine's Day and Mardi Gras-themed events with the sisters.

In terms of philanthropy, we held our Paddy Murphy week in the fall. The week, which raised $1,000 total, consisted of our annual coffin contest, coffee and donut sales outside of WALC, and Pie an ΣAE. We also held a new pickleball tournament event with AXO and raised $2,000. Our final fundraising event last semester was bed sheets sales, which raised about $350. As a chapter, we participated in over 400 community service hours.

This March, we hosted an ΣAE sweetheart event where sororities helped us raise money for a weeklong philanthropy event. We are planning on holding our annual Big Digs volleyball event after spring break. Lastly, we plan on holding a silent auction during our Mom's Day event. Proceeds from all our events benefit Riley Hospital for Children or another philanthropy of our choosing.

Fraternally,
